Lydia Dugdale, MD, MAR, is the Dorothy L. and Daniel H. Silberberg Associate Professor of Medicine at Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons and Director of the Center for Clinical Medical Ethics. Associate Director of Clinical Ethics at New York-Presbyterian Hospital. A practicing internist, her scholarship focuses on end-of-life issues, the role of aesthetics in teaching ethics, moral injury, and the doctor-patient relationship. She edited Dying in the Twenty-First Century (MIT Press, 2015) and is author of The Lost Art of Dying (HarperOne, 2020), a popular press book on the preparation for death. Dugdale holds an MD from University of Chicago, completed residency training at Yale-New Haven Hospital, and holds a MAR in ethics from Yale Divinity School.

★ 2021 Word&Way Book of the Year

COVID-19 forced health professionals to treat patients in ways that violated their core values and beliefs, inflicting moral injury on clinicians and dehumanizing patients. Although building resilience can mitigate moral injury, it is not enough. This talk will consider the role of health care leadership in repairing moral injury.
